Mac OS 8 is a quantum leap toward the future of computing. So powerful, responsive and easy to use, it's out of this world. Multitasking is a reality. Internet access is an integral part of the system. A powerful suite of multimedia tools is at your command. And productivity is light years ahead.

Just power up your computer. Slip in the CD. Follow the step by step instructions and it's installed. Mac OS 8 is automatically configured for networking, file sharing and printing. And the Interactive Assistant guides you through everything, from setting the time, date and location, to setting your Finder operating system software and other preferences for your personal computing style, comfort and level of proficiency.

At the core of the Mac OS 8 is the new PowerPC native, multitasking, multi-threaded Finder. It takes full advantage of PowerPC processors. So it's lightning fast. You can run multiple Internet access is built into Mac OS 8. Once installed, you have one-click access to a universe of information.

An Internet Setup Assistant helps you configure your system. Your choice of browser, Netscape Navigator 3.0.1, Internet Explorer and Cyberdog 2.0 Internet software are all on board. You can visit web sites from all applications using the "Connect To" shortcut in your Apple menu*.

Download Java applets from the Internet and run them on your desktop with 100% native Java. Start sending and receiving email immediately after setting up your account. And use Personal Web Sharing to share documents on the Internet and on your intranet with anyone, using a standard web browser.

Imagine producing high-impact multimedia communications, complete with video, 3D graphics, virtual reality scenes and audio. Mac OS 8 gives you that power. QuickTime Media Layer (QTML) is the industry standard for cross-platform multimedia authoring and playback, and includes the QuickTime VR application program with its gallery of virtual reality objects. And the QuickDraw 3D application program, which brings real-time, workstation-class graphics to your Mac.
